Workshop on Geographical Indication and Plant Variety Rights in India

Report

The Department of Botany organized a one-day workshop on Geographical Indication and Plant Variety Rights in India on the 12th October, 2020. The event was conducted online via the Zoom platform. The workshop was graced by Dr. Anil Wable from PVP College, Pravaranagar, who served as the chief guest and shared his extensive knowledge on the subject.

The workshop focused on the importance of Geographical Indications (GI) and Plant Variety Rights (PVR) in preserving the unique characteristics of regional products and plant varieties in India. Dr. Anil Wable provided an insightful presentation on the legal frameworks surrounding GIs and PVRs, emphasizing their role in protecting local heritage and fostering agricultural innovation.

Throughout the workshop, participants were encouraged to engage with the content, leading to a dynamic and interactive discussion. The online format facilitated a smooth and effective exchange of ideas, ensuring that the learning experience remained impactful despite the remote setting.

33 students participated in the workshop through online mode. The event concluded with a vote of thanks to Dr. Anil Wable for his invaluable contributions and to the students for their enthusiastic participation.
